Uninvited Presence

Conception, direction, choreography, and interpretation Ugnė Dievaitytė | Music Mira Calix
Duration 20’ dievaityte.weebly.com

‘Uninvited Presence’ reflects on an odd presence which penetrates our inner world without being invited, neither required, nor desired. An intruder, which starts expanding little by little, like cancer in the body, goes on gradually occupying more and more space of our Self until totally displacing it. The work is a solo that refers to the dreams that we conceive, to the expectations that they will come true and to the sorrowful collision with reality. The piece is constructed via the exploration of the internal movement, of emotions and their reflection in the body. It is an investigation of the corporal language with the objective to discover transparent and sincere movement in its dramatic form that could replace the verbal language.

It’s Like Watching Clouds

Choreography, conception, direction, and interpretation Ugnė Dievaitytė, Poliana Lima | Music Pablo Sanchez | Light design Daniel Alcaraz | Costumes Ugnė Dievaitytė, Poliana Lima

‘It’s Like Watching Clouds’ is a contemporary dance duo which originated while exploring the possibilities of moving the head (the head as a driving force of the movement, as an isolated, as an abandoned part of the body, as a connection of two heads etc.). It is an intention to bring to the scene the childlike practice of seeing figures and forms of watching clouds. The piece was awarded at the contest DeUnaPieza V edition (Madrid) with the II prize for the best adaptation to the alternative space.

Ugnė Dievaitytė identifies herself with the research of body transformation, unconventional movement and alternative ways of approaching contemporary dance and dance in general. She has collaborated with diverse companies and artists from Lithuania, United Kindom, and Spain: AURA Dance Theatre, Vytis Jankauskas, Aira Naginevičiūtė, ARCO collective, Poliana Lima and others.

In Madrid Ugnė takes part in the project ¿M.R.U.M.? of the company Babiruza danza. Poliana Lima (Brazil) trained as a dancer in diverse dance companies of San Paulo (Borelli cia de dace, Maurício de Oliveira e Siameses cia de dansa, P.U.L.T.S. Choreographic theatre), has participated in workshops of various dance schools. In Madrid Poliana has collaborated with various contemporary dance theatres and artists, she has also successfully carried her own creations.
The object of the performance ‘1863’ is the revolt, which took place in 1863 in Lithuania, thus the performance is dedicated to the 150th anniversary of this event. The choreographer doesn’t illustrate this particular revolt. Specific details, personalities of revolt don’t interest him. The performance reflects our common human experience living without peace.

The Artistic Director Birutė Letukaitė got the idea of creating a video film, which is kind of a prologue to the performance ‘1863’. It gives the audience a bit of historical information and indicates a certain direction. The video is also made using contemporary sound, view and text mixture. To create the performance ‘1863’ AURA Dance Theatre commissioned one of the most prominent personalities of the contemporary dance in Hungary, the choreographer and dancer Ferenc Feher, who was awarded with the Rudolf Laban Prize for The Best Contemporary Dance Performance of year 2010 in Hungary.

It is a fusion of dance, theatre, music and literature that has in its centre relationships of parents with their grown up children. The stage presents live music and two stories in one house. The first one explores the concept of love and freedom in Richard Bach’s novella ‘Jonathan Livingston Seagull’: As for the second one, it is about the feeling of guilt and the inability to communicate shared by the creators of the performance through their personal experiences. ‘Home Trip’ is a performance about home of childhood, it reflects what it is, when it is left and why we come back to it.

The young dancers and choreographers Airida Gudaitė and Laurynas Žakevičius established the first urban dance theatre in Lithuania, ‘Low Air’, in order to uncover the artistic potential of street dance and introduce it to theatre lovers across the country. Both known from street dance contests and festivals as winners of several awards, the two dancers created the first urban dance performance in Lithuania in 2011 entitled ‘Feel Link’. In 2012 the performance was nominated for the Golden Stage Cross Award.
The dance performance ‘Arrhythmias’ pursues the theme of human relationships, embarked in ‘Moving Targets’, the previous performance of the company. ‘Moving Targets’ was a performance reflecting the instrumental relationships set up in a modern society, whereas ‘Arrhythmias’ is based on a message telling us that one’s life in society is a burden that every human being should carry himself. On one hand, we are trying to become free of restrictions imputed by society. On the other, while learning how to love and to be loved, we have to learn to humble ourselves, to sympathize with each others, to engage and to be devoted to each others. In this case, our life within the society becomes at the same time a curse, a blessing and a salvation.

The dancer, choreographer and teacher Vytis Jankauskas established his own dance company in 1997. During more than twenty years of personal research, the choreographer has developed his individual, purified and expressive body language. The several past years have been the years of maturity both of the choreographer and the company, whose input in the development of Lithuanian contemporary dance was marked by two Golden Stage Cross Awards (for the performances ‘Drowned Valley’, 2003 and ‘Vigil’, 2008).

Andrius Katinas is working mostly as a performer or a collaborative choreographer. Since 1999 he has been creating theatre and dance performances both in Lithuania and Finland.

‘Aquariums’ is a performance taking place in an unusual environment, in an office that spectators can observe from outside. The creation is a unique opportunity to look at a banal work space from a different angle as well as to reflect about rituality and routine from an artistic point of view. ‘Aquariums’ also discloses openly interdisciplinary, chaotic existence, daily rush, self-demonstration and other themes. It is a reflection about how people work, and let themselves be demonstrated behind a glass every day as if they were unconscious creatures. It is also a deeper look at how a working day starts and ends. If the passersby can see your shoelaces in your working environment at the end of the day, does it give a true feeling about the spirit of the space or it only turns a human into a regular faceless worker?

Young dancer and choreographer Aušra Krasauskaitė graduated from the Ballet Department of the National M. K. Čiurlionis School of Arts in 2007. In 2012 she received BA in Choreography from Klaipėda University. Now Aušra is one of the artists representing the Artists Group ‘Fish Eye’.

GONE TO GET MILK

Choreography Ieva Kuniskis | Performance Helen Aschauer, Charlie Cooper Ford, Ieva Kuniskis
Music John Thole, Broadcast & The Focus Group, Johann Sebastian Bach (Concentus Musicus Wien), Goran Bregović
Duration 25’ www.ievakuniskis.com

The same walls, the same people, the same never changing landscape that make you want to scream for change, yet the same familiarity that brings you comfort. And every time you say you’re leaving, you are just going to get milk...

‘Gone To Get Milk’ is a physical theatre performance that balances delicately between comic absurdity of domestic life and the hopelessness of a ‘no way out’ situation. The work sees three people confined to one space; their characters connected by mutual history and utility bills, locked in interlacing relationships that both suffocate and comfort them. Through awkward duets and solos dancers relationships fluctuate between tenderness, suppressed aggression and apathy.

Ieva Kuniskis began dancing in Vilnius. She creates dance for theatre and camera, also working in site-sensitive contexts. Ieva currently lives and creates in London, occasionally performing in other choreographers’ work. Ieva’s approach to dance-making is rooted in Lithuanian theatre and folk tradition of storytelling. Her interests currently lie within the exploration of domestic themes and social relationships. She utilizes personal stories to achieve authentic connection that goes beyond expression of form.
Mary Anning was a female fossil hunter in pre-Darwinian early 18th century Britain. ‘The Curio Cabinet’ draws inspiration from this remarkable paleontologist and the creatures she discovered, her male contemporaries and the shifting of social structures of the time. This performance is the result of collaboration between Deborah Light and AURA Dance Company supported by Chapter and Wales Arts International and Lithuanian Culture Support Foundation.

Deborah Light (United Kingdom) is an independent choreographer and dance artist based in Cardiff. Her work spans stage, installation and site based performance as well as image based projects. Her work has been presented and commissioned internationally since graduating from Laban in 2001. Deborah is an associate artist at Chapter, a semi-finalist for The Place Prize (2010) and a Creative Wales Award recipient (2009). Deborah brings together talented artists from across disciplines to collaborate on her projects.

Once upon a time, there were 3 Kings who had a kingdom where the sun never set. They were holding all the power of politics, economic, religion and cultural affairs. Everyone in the kingdom seemed to be happy. Only when they died, people have realized that they have been fooled by them for all their lives.

When they died, all their feathers were removed from their bodies and placed on the ground of the kingdom.

The sketch of ‘W(o)men’ has been presented in 2012 in the Lithuanian and Dutch dance collaboration event. After a huge success the choreographer Jérôme Meyer was invited to create a full length performance with Lithuanian dancers.

Jérôme Meyer studied at the Conservatorium of Geneva and at the Heinz Boisl Stiftung in Munich, after which he acquired his first contract with Scapino Ballet. He later danced with the Geneva ballet, the Batsheva Dance company and the Nederlands Dans Theater I. He worked with and performed soloist roles in ballets of William Forsythe, Wim Vandekeybus, Mats Ek. As a choreographer, Jérôme is known for numerous outstanding works, part of which was commissioned by Korzo Productions.

‘Chimera’s Beads’ is a dance performance where five dancers are creating a map of female experiences and transformations. In this map one finds the landscape of accidental laws, the cycles of transformations and natural balance of the inevitable. Long-lasting cooperation between the choreographer Aira Naginevičiūtė and the composer Vladas Dieninis in experiments uniting dance and sound has been embodied through transformations of acoustic signals into the optic sculptures. Dancers are using different constructions, objects, environment and their own bodies to create sound sculptures, to transform the invisible into visible.

The choreographer and director Aira Naginevičiūtė entered the professional theatre stage in 1989 and became one of the originators of modern dance in Lithuania. Aira’s uniqueness lays in her visual, innovative, and meditative performances, seemingly visions-like, full of metaphors and links to philosophical truths, filled with sound architecture.

In 2003 Aira Naginevičiūtė received the most important theatre award in Lithuania – the Golden Stage Cross (for the performance ‘Processus’, 2002). In 2013 she established AIROS Dance Theatre.

Duration 60’ www.menuspaustuve.lt

This is probably the first time in Lithuania that tree dance artists have cooperated to create a performance that looks at the Lithuanian contemporary dance scene with a self-irony glance, quoting cliché movements, phrases, even costumes details. ‘Contemporary?’ is focusing ironically on the processes of a dance making. What does contemporary dance piece consist of? What does it talk about? Which objects are necessary and which are optional? Does audience understand what it is all about? Do we need to explain the meaning of the piece to the audience? The answer is – just do it.

Agnė Ramanauskaitė, Mantas Stabačinskas, Paulius Tamolė are not new in the professional dance scene, but this is the first time they collaborate to create a piece together. Agnė Ramanauskaitė and Paulius Tamolė graduated from The Lithuanian Theatre and Music Academy (MA in acting-contemporary dance, 2009). While Mantas Stabačinskas holds BA from The Lithuanian University of Educational Science (BA in dance education, 2013). All three of them are freelance dancers, actors and choreographers, who have been working together with Lithuanian and foreign choreographers.
In June 2012 the first choreography workshop ‘Creative Impulse’ was organized, where LNOBT ballet dancers had the opportunity to create and show short contemporary ballet and contemporary dance miniatures. Some of the dancers were cooperating with contemporary dance choreographers; others had their choreographic debut. The idea of this project is to blow new winds of creativity into national ballet, thus it would become more up to date, would dear more. The project continued in 2013 and thus dance miniatures ‘Journey’ and ‘In the Water’ were a part of it.

In 1999 Martynas Rimeikis graduated from the Ballet Department of the National M. K. Čiurlionis School of Arts and in that same year became a soloist with the Ballet Company of the Lithuanian National Opera and Ballet Theatre. In 2007 he won the ‘Švyturiai’ Award as Ballet Hope of the Year, and in 2011 he won the ‘Švyturiai’ Award as the Male Ballet Soloist of the Year. In 2013 his choreographed miniature “Waiting for Godot” was presented at the International Contemporary Dance Festival ‘New Baltic Dance’.

After leaving the Ballet Department of the National M. K. Čiurlionis School of Arts the young Lithuanian dancer and choreographer Erika Vizbaraitė continued her studies at the Rambert School of Ballet and Contemporary Dance in London. Several years later, she graduated from the Lithuanian Academy of Music and Theatre, obtaining her BA in contemporary dance and acting. Erika has created several performances (dance opera ‘NO-AI-DI’, dance and music performance ‘Home’, dance performances ‘One’ and ‘Ladder’) where the interaction of music and dance occupies an important place.

During the 17 years of its existence the International Contemporary Dance Festival ‘New Baltic Dance’ has grown up into one of the main and most prestigious dance festivals in the Baltic Sea region. It is organised by the Lithuanian Dance Information Centre and Vilnius Festivals. Each early May it takes place in different venues in Vilnius. Plartforma
International Contemporary Arts Festival

The main idea of the festival ‘Plartforma’ is to present various forms of visual and performing arts as well as artists from Lithuania and foreign countries in one cultural platform. Organised by the Artists Group ‘Fish Eye’ since 2005 every late August/September the festival offers a possibility to uncover new cultural areas in Klaipėda city, while inhabiting former urban and industrial territories with creative projects. The main concept of the festival is related to the geographical and metaphysical interpretations of boundary zones. This idea is already embodied in the character of ‘Plartforma’, where ignoring traditional boundaries of art, different genres, expressions, and ideas interact. Such a synthesis of art unfolds in a programme of contemporary dance, theatre, music and visual art.

The festival is a continuation of the international art festival SEAS that was co-organised with the Swedish cultural institution ‘Intercult’ and held in Klaipėda in 2004.

APH is a unique creative phenomenon in Lithuania, a vibrating performing arts venue and a meeting place for artistic souls. Established in a former printing house dating back to 1585, nowadays it deals with performing arts layouts and linotypes – those that help to develop a new understanding of creativity within modern society. From the start of its activities in 2002, APH was involved in harbouring and promoting contemporary dance in Lithuania. Since then, hundreds of theatrical, contemporary dance, new circus, interdisciplinary and educational projects take place annually in the building. It has been home for many contemporary dance professionals who otherwise had no space to rehearse and present their works. Since 2003 APH runs one of its largest programmes – the programme for young performing arts professionals ‘Open Space’. Within the framework of this programme, many young contemporary dance artists debuted on the professional stage. Some of them, like Lora Juodkaitė and Petras Lisauskas, used the programme as a launch pad to access international audiences. Since 2011, APH is organising a stage art festival for young audiences ‘Different Theatre for Children’ where dance pieces are staged among other kinds of performances. Since 2006, APH runs an international contemporary circus festival ‘New Circus Weekend’. Besides other projects, since 2010 APH is also running an international residency programme.

Lora Juodkaitė Dance Theater

Lora Juodkaitė Dance Theatre was founded in 2013 by the dancer and choreographer Lora Juodkaitė.

She debuted on the professional Lithuanian stage in 2006 and since then she has been widely acclaimed by audiences and critics. Juodkaitė’s performances (among others ‘Trimatrix. Three Motions’ (2007), ‘Sibyl’ (2008), ‘Prayer in the Sand’ (2009)) were shown in several Lithuanian cities as well as in Armenia, France, Germany, Israel, Russia, the United Kingdom, Turkey, and Ukraine. In addition to her solo performances, she also cooperates and performs with companies, other choreographers and directors. ‘Salamandra’s Dream. Picture’ (2006, Arts Printing House) has been created with Valentinas Masalskis, a theatre director, and was awarded with two national theatre prizes: the Golden Stage Cross for the Debut of the Year and for the Best Music of the Performance. Juodkaitė started working with the dancer/choreographer Ziya Azazi in January 2012. As a result, two performances were born: ‘ICONS’ and ‘Energy’. In 2012 Juodkaitė together with the dancer/choreographer Kenzo Kusuda presented a dance performance entitled ‘Mirage’. The first performance of the newly established Lora Juodkaitė Dance Theatre – a solo piece by Juodkaitė – will premiere in January 2014 in Lithuania.

Vytis Jankauskas Dance Company

The dancer, choreographer and pedagogue Vytis Jankauskas established his own dance company in 1997. In 2008 the company was given the status of a professional dance theatre. During sixteen years of its development, the company has become a distinctive phenomenon of contemporary dance in Lithuania thanks to its purified and expressive performances. The company has performed in international dance festivals in Sweden, Poland, Estonia, Germany, Belarus, Russia, and Egypt. The several past years have been the years of maturity both for the choreographer and the company, whose input in the development of the contemporary Lithuanian dance was marked by two Golden Stage Cross awards (for the performances ‘Drowned Valley’, 2003 and ‘Vigil’, 2008). Besides, the company organises various educational dance projects in Lithuania and abroad in collaboration with other NGOs. Furthermore, in 1995 the Company has opened a dance studio where Vytis Jankauskas and other teachers give contemporary dance classes.
